

DESCRIPTION: Ginger Geoffrey - Too Old to Die Young is a UK-Alt-Country-Rock Solo Band, (think playing the drums with your feet, while singing and strumming guitar), a contemporary plate spinning troubadour. Influenced by the intense rhythmic guitar style of Richie Havens and vivid lyrics of Nevin, Duritz and Heaton, (Fairground Attraction, Counting Crows, and The Beautiful South). As a late blooming Gen X singer songwriter, Ginger pens songs drawing upon the countless jobs he's attempted to hold down over a bunch of decades; antics with likeminded rebels and of course he can't help but pick at some of life's inevitable scars.

BIOGRAPHY: The son of a dustman and seamstress, raised on a West London, council estate. After the briefest of spell in Cornwall, Ginger laid his hat in Staffordshire England where he's mostly lived since.

Having worked in a wide range of jobs in construction, hospitality, transport, distribution, janitorial services, and education, he was also an employee rights activist, advocating for the guilty and representing the innocent at hearings and tribunals. Many of his songs draw upon these lived experiences. A self-taught musician, Ginger started out playing in garage bands and busking in the UK and across Europe. After a performing hiatus, he returned to his first love, music, playing covers as part of a charity events duo "Bash and Strum" the collaboration culminating in a debut album of original songs 'Rendezvous' released in 2014. He had a further foray as a covers function duo 'Rock Swings' before stepping out as a solo artist, playing in bars, and festivals.

As Ginger prepares to retire from the 9 to 5, he's finally found his singer songwriting voice again, regularly writing, recording, and playing his own songs, busking and performing at festivals, new music venues, and occasionally appearing and performing live on the odd radio show, and as might be expected, also plays the odd cover gig here and there to.
